

THINKPROGRESS

Follow @thinkprogress

225K followers

Like

240k

THINKPROGRESSECONOMY

State-Level Tax Cuts Don't Boost Job Growth, Study Says

Travis Waldron on Mar 25, 2013 at 12:05 pm

Few of Republican governors have proposed massive tax cuts that they say will help generate job and economic growth in their states, with some pushing for the abolition of income taxes altogether. That is a misguided approach, though, according to an analysis of past tax cuts from the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

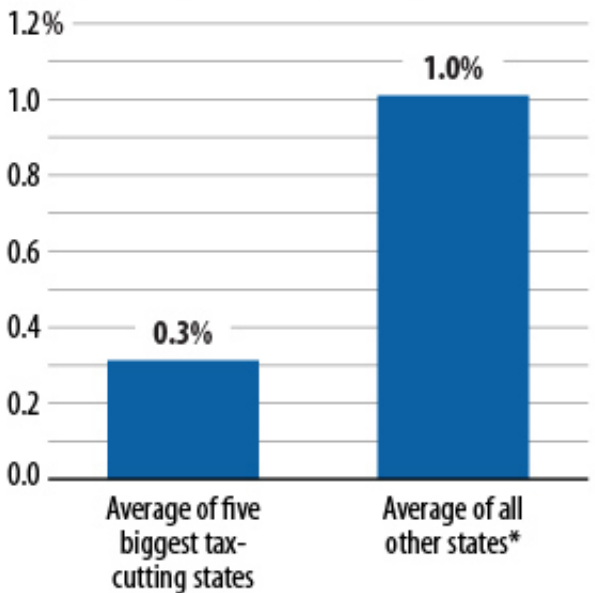

The five states that implemented deep tax cuts during the 1990s experienced slower job growth over the next economic cycle than states that did not, and none of those states experienced income growth that exceeded inflation, CBPP found:

Similarly, the five states that enacted the deepest tax cuts during the boom years of the middle and late 1990s saw job growth over the next full economic cycle (2000-2007) of less than 0.3 percent per year, on average, compared to 1.0 percent for the other states (see graph). They also had slower income growth than the rest of the nation on average.

The Five States That Cut Taxes the Most in the 1990s Had Slower Job Growth Than Other States Over the Next Economic Cycle

Average annual growth in employment, 2000-2007

*Average does not include NJ, which was one of the six states with the largest tax cuts in the 1990s (along with CO, CT, DE, MA, and NY), but – unlike those states – raised taxes enough in the 2000s to offset the 1990s tax cuts.

Source: CBPP calculations of BLS data

Center on Budget and Policy Priorities | cbpp.org

CBPP’s report also noted that of eight major reports that studied the effects of state-level tax cuts on economic growth, six found that the cuts did not spur growth. Another found inconsistent results and only one supported the idea.

Still, Republicans in Kansas, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Louisiana, and Nebraska are pushing massive tax cuts that largely benefit corporations and the wealthy under the banner of boosting economic growth. Those tax cuts will leave lower and middle class families with higher tax rates and fewer services on which they depend. What they won’t deliver, however, is a stronger state-level economy.

Like ThinkProgress on Facebook

Close

Like

240,481 people like this.

Don't show this to

me again

From the Web

by Taboola

What is the "Lochte Edge?"

Billionaire Tells Americans to Prepare For "Financial Ruin"

5 Signs You'll Get Cancer

The 8 million Dollar Car

Top 10 Nicest Cars on the Market

Conditions That Mimic Rheumatoid Arthritis

Steve Martin Becomes First-Time Dad at Age 67